Runbeck Election Services Hires Jim Elkins as Integration Engineer

Tempe, Arizona [September 22, 2011] - Runbeck Election Services, one of the industry's leading providers of elections solutions, announced today that it has hired James R. Elkins II (Jim), as Integration Engineer. Elkins will be based in Romney, Ind., and will be leading the software and hardware integrations for Runbeck's election equipment.

Jim is a certified Microsoft instructor, networking consultant, and Senior LAN administrator / engineer. He comes to Runbeck from Pitney Bowes where he worked with the Pitney Bowes mail sorter (ReliaVote) product line and performed installations and training work.

"The tremendous growth we are experiencing requires that we continue to refine and specialize in order to maximize the innovative election products and services we provide for our customers," Kevin Bannon, president of Runbeck Election Services. "We're excited to have Jim on board. His expertise in mail applications and vote-by-mail solutions will help Runbeck manage election solution implementations for our customers."

Elkins' wealth of knowledge in IT, printing, mail operations, and project management make him an excellent resource for Runbeck and their customers. He will be directly involved in the implementation of the Agilis Ballot Sorting System in several counties this fall.
